of the lace and lingerie blouse in lace transparency has rendered of prime importance

The Dainty Camisol

—such a close accessory of the waist itself as to be almost a part of it—certainly the chief factor in showing to advantage the delicate beauty of the blouse materials.

These elaborate little undergarments are developed in beautiful combinations of white, flesh and pink crepe de chine, with trimmings of fluffy laces, flouting and French ribbon bowings, giving a soft diaphanous effect, yet retaining in accordance with every mode the requisite slowness of line.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

The Governor's Mansion was a perfect fairland of exquisite blooms last evening for the first of a series of dances given by the Governor and Mrs. Henry C. Stuart. Day trees, palms and rare maiden-hair ferns formed an effective background for the gorgeous flowers used in decorating the stately rooms, and some very handsome gowns were worn by the women present. Governor and Mrs. Stuart received in the wide old hall, and stood to greet their guests before a group of palms and tall stands of silver snap dragons. Mrs. Stuart wore a French gown of yellow tulle and tulle, made with a bustle effect of the same material. The skirt was scalloped and embroidered in gold, and the bodice and front of the dress were trimmed in some quaint lace to match. It was a lovely gown, and Mrs. Stuart looked as if she had stepped from the frame of a wonderful painting. She wore no jewels, and carried a huge black and silver fan instead of a bouquet.

In the main hall of the mansion the decorations were all in pink and silver. The doors were outlined with a delicate tracing of pink, festooned with bows of shaded pink ribbon and silver gray wall pockets filled with pink blossoms were used everywhere. The walls of the drawing-room were outlined in light asparagus fern and great bunches of radiance roses were bound to the white columns, which were also wound with asparagus fern. Both ornaments were draped with a curtain of amilia, and the fireplace were banked with cerise azaleas and lavender rhododendron. On the mantel was a great gilt basket that reached to the top of the mirror. The handle was wound with lavender gauze ribbon, and showers of Killarney roses, azalea pink flowers and radiance roses, making a color scheme of cerise, pink, and white, overtopped the sides of the basket and reached nearly to the flower-banked hearth. The same arrangement and color scheme was carried out on the other mantel, the flowers coming from boxes of plenty, fastened with green ribbon. A fringe of the asparagus fern, arranged at intervals with the silver wall pockets, filled with pink snap dragons and festooned with streamers of shell-pink chiffon, decorated the long room, and great pictures of exquisite flowers formed the base of the wall decorations. There were four great coconut fibre urns, formed of cerise sweet peas, and filled with radiance roses, and used against a background of shaded roses and ribbon, giving the effect of gold-colored pictures hanging against the wall. These were made exclusive for Mrs. Stuart's dance, and planned entirely in her honor.

The dining-room the walls were hung with green calico leaves, interspersed with the wall pockets of pink snap dragons, and the high mantel was banked with lilies and azaleas. The table was set with a novel arrangement of electric lamps in wicker baskets. The shades were formed of cerise sweet peas fringed with violet, and lilies of the valley, and the vases were filled with tulips. The dining room was decorated in tall rustic baskets of pink snap dragons, and a drapery of amilia, caught up with pink tulle bows, outlined the doors. The library was decorated in white lilies in Easter lilies in tall silver vases.

The dance was by far the most elaborate affair of the kind given by the Stuarts since their arrival in Richmond, and the decorations, which were done by a Richmond artist, were planned and arranged in honor of the gracious mistress of the Governor's house. About 100 guests were entertained.

Ball at the Richmond.

Quantities of spring flowers decorated the ballroom at the Richmond Hotel last evening for the annual weekly ball given there under the direction of Miss Nora White. The small tables were decorated in slender vases of flowers. The feature of the affair was the dancing of the maxims by Miss White and Raymond Massey. The dancers were much applauded, and gave several encores. Miss White wore a lovely gown of yellow chiffon with a back and a butterfly bow in the back and a drapery of green and gold tulle. The bodice was embroidered in silver and crystal, and her bouquet was of pink orchids and lilies of the valley.

The next ball at the Richmond will be held on Wednesday, April 1.

In Paris.

The American Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Joseph E. Willard and Miss Willard, who have been in London, were presented at court in Paris last night, before returning to Madrid. The ambassador is now in Paris on a short stay, before returning to Madrid. He is accompanied by his wife, who is the youngest daughter of Mr. Elizabeth Willard, who is attending the Markers Plays.

The Markers Plays. The Markers Plays of Music gave a recital in the auditorium of the E. Lee School, Petersburg, Wednesday evening. The program was the last of a series of musicals which have been given from the works of pupils, Miss Louise Barker, of Richmond, who has been in the school and its remarkable technical ability is only excelled by a very winning personality. Her willingness to work, justify her audience in believing she will have a noted career and the Virginia pianists. Her selections included:
